

Abstract

Propagation of transient SH (shear horizontal) waves in an homogeneous isotropic elastic layer, lying on elastic half-space, is studied. The waves are created by giving horizontal concentrated tangential load on free surface of a layer. The problem is solved by Laplace and Fourier integral transformations. The inverse transformations are calculated by the Cagniard de Hoop method.